PMBOK p235-236

- managing communications to
 - satisfy the needs of
 - resolve issues with, project stakeholders.
- increases the likelihood that the project will not veer off track due to unresolved stakeholder issues,
- enhances the ability of persons to operate synergistically, and
- limits disruptions during the project.
- The project manager is usually responsible for stakeholder management.

The Organizational Management Perspective

Organisational Environment, Culture and Attitude to PM

- Top management views of PM
 - many organizational managers still view project management as a technical discipline, not a business discipline
- Silo Mentality
 - Getting people to work across functional lines
